

PolarAid - Health at your fingertips

The human body has been mapped out for a long period of time, and the presentation of individual body parts and systems in certain parts of the skin is known, especially on our palms and soles, and of course our ear lobe. The skin, which is referred to as our external brain, accurately shows the condition of our internal body parts, as well as our whole health condition. By stimulating certain zones on human skin it is possible to act on these same body parts that are problematic, as well as to affect their stabilization and recovery by inducing energy therein. Most eastern alternative healing techniques work on this principle as well as the most modern quantum and bioresonance devices, showing some truly amazing results in diagnosis and treatment. Since me and a number of my colleagues who work on these devices know their options, we were even more astonishing when we have examined and understood the possibilities of a very simple device called PolarAid. The invention of Russian scientist Georges Lakhovskog is basically an antenna that collects and focuses on the natural life energy from our environment directly into our cells and thus they provide the necessary energy for their normal operation and regeneration. When we have enough energy in the body, there is no external agent that can hurt us. Young people have a lot of energy and are therefore less susceptible to disease than the elderly population. I have recently talked to my colleague in Kranj in Slovenia who works on bioresonance devices and he told me an interesting story. One day an old lady of about 70 came into his office. When he began to examine her energy status on the bioresonance device, all values were at their maximum, as it was the case with extremely young and healthy people. He thought that it was something wrong with the device. However, in his further conversation with her, he learned that she had been using PolarAid for several months. He heard of this device for the first time, and since then he recommended it from the bottom of his heart to all his patients. So if we know how much energy is important for the state of our health, of course, that the logical question will be how to get to it.

Activation of the whole body for a few minutes

As we have been investigating the methods of use of PolarAid, we found out that through these reflex zones of the skin PolaaAid may act on the internal body parts improving their work. Since we know that we have a presentation of the whole our body on our feet (see photo), in a very simple way, while sitting in your chair, you can place your feet on the disc on the floor in front of you, and in ten minutes energy shall start to flow throughout your body, to all its parts. It will also establish a much better blood and lymphatic circulation, and cold feet phenomenon, that many people suffer for years, will disappear. Of course, various swellings on legs will disappear, as well.

Foot reflexology chart

In Slovenia some tests have already been carried out with this device, and a special microscopy technique (i.e. Dark field microscopy). It has been concluded that treatment with PolarAid prevents sticking of blood elements, and thus the formation of blood clots and reduces the possibility of heart attack and stroke. It is very important to maintain a high level of energy, especially during the winter time, when we are exposed to illness. Another simple way of energizing the whole body is just holding PolarAid disc between your palms for 5-10 minutes. Most people notice that when they take a disc in this way, they feel very calm and relaxed, and some of them say that they feel "like they administered some tranquilizer." How the reduction and neutralization of stress is important for our health is already well known. There are many ways of application of this truly amazing device. You can read more about this topic on the website www.polaraidhealth.com

If we know all these possibilities, then we can certainly say that health is truly at our fingertips.